Shopping streets & shopping malls

There are several shopping streets in Rotterdam that invite you to take a leisurely stroll, stroll, and store. These include, for example, the famous shopping street Lijnbaan, the Hoogstraat, known as the oldest pedestrian zone, or the Meent promenade. The KoopGoot, which is laid out like a tube, is worth seeing even without shopping plans because of its location.

Although they are located somewhat outside the city, they are still good addresses if you want to go shopping on rainy days. The Rotterdam Alexandrium Mall and the Zuidplein Mall leave nothing to be desired. Both shopping centers are easily accessible by public transport.

Markets

Rotterdam has 14 markets of which the markets on the Binnenrotte and the Afrikaanderplein belong to the biggest markets in the Netherlands. Check out this selection of Rotterdam's best markets:

Bars & Restaurants

Rotterdam Market Hall, Witte de Withstraat, 'Oude Haven', Katendrecht

Museums

Museum Boijmans Van Beuningen, the Kunsthal, the Witte de With center, Fotomuseum, Maritiem Museum, the Museum Rotterdam or the Natural History Museum are all worth mentioning. A special highlight is the event Museum Night 010, where the cultural centers and museums are open until late at night. If you are not yet tired, you can enjoy the exuberant atmosphere at one of the many after-parties.

Travel

Get a bike or rent one locally

The best and fastest way to get around Rotterdam is by bike. Because the bicycle is part of the Dutch culture. As in every other city in the Netherlands, Rotterdam has countless bike paths that are not only used by the locals. That is why cycling here is especially safe and a pleasant means of transportation that keeps you fit at the same time.

RET

<https://www.ret.nl/>

Getting around by public transport (RET) is a good alternative for wet days. In Rotterdam, the public transport network consists of buses, streetcars, metros, and ferries that will get you from A to B. Water taxis will help you get around.

Train

<https://www.ns.nl/en>

Thanks to the good network of routes, a train ride in the Netherlands is always a pleasant option for travel. It may even make sense for you to use the rail company Nederlandse Spoorwegen (NS) directly instead of flying if you are traveling from neighboring countries like Germany. Trains are usually on time and run at short intervals, making rail an attractive mode of transportation. There is a reason why rail is the mode of choice for trips within the country. It takes less than an hour to get to Amsterdam or Utrecht by train.

9292 travels with you

<https://9292.nl/en>

Want to go to somewhere by public transport? That can be done easily, by using the train, bus, metro or subway. Purchase your e-ticket for train, bus, tram or subway in the Netherlands in the 9292 app. We're pleased to explain how to do this and tell you which public transport companies are included.

If you don't have the 9292 app yet, download it via this link or search for '9292' in the app store on your phone.

Rotterdam Airport

<https://www.rotterdamthe Hagueairport.nl/en/>

Of course, an airport in a city like Rotterdam is a must. Rotterdam shares this with the nearby neighboring city of The Hague. The airport is located quite centrally on the outskirts of Rotterdam, which makes the onward journey towards the city center quite comfortable. It takes just 15 minutes by cab and only 10 minutes longer by public bus. Alternatively, you can land at Amsterdam Schiphol (AMS) or Utrecht (UTC) and take the train to Rotterdam.
